DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 24 November 2006 has been entered.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-19 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-7 and 16-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dravland (4,906,243) in view of Imsangjan et al. (7,011,653).

Dravland discloses all aspects of the claimed invention with the exception of the front section having an S-shaped arcuate edge portion. Dravland discloses a disposable undergarment having a front waist portion 10c, a belly portion 14c, a rear waist portion 10a, a rear back portion 14a, and a crotch portion 10b, as shown in figure

4. The undergarment has a pair of leg openings, each leg opening having an S-shaped arcuate edge portion in the rear section 14a that forms a convex projection at the lower portion of the leg opening, as shown in figure 1.

Imsangjan disclose an undergarment having leg openings, each leg opening having an S-shaped arcuate edge portion in the front section, as shown in figure 4. The S-shaped arcuate edge portion help keep the garment in place during use and improve comfort, as disclosed in column 3, lines 19-48.

It would therefore be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to provide the front portion of the leg openings of Dravland with an S-shaped arcuate edge portion, as taught by Imsangjan, to help keep the garment in place during use and improve comfort.

With respect to claim 2, Dravland discloses that each of the leg openings is elasticized by elastic threads 20 and 22, as shown in figure 1.

With respect to claim 3, the elastic threads 20 and 22 extend along the convex edge portion, through the intermediate edge portion, and into the front portion, which when modified by Imsangjan is the concave edge portion.

With respect to claims 4 and 5, a plurality of transversely extending elastic threads 18 extend through the waist portion, as shown in figure 1.

With respect to claim 6, the article comprises an absorbent core 14.

With respect to claim 7, the article further comprises an absorbent core 14 and insert sheet 16, and a gasketed compartment for absorption of liquids.

With respect to claim 16, the core 14 comprises absorbent material, as disclosed in column 2, line 1.

With respect to claim 17, the article comprises a fluid acquisition layer 16 disposed over the core 14, as disclosed in column 1, line 68.

Claims 8-13 and 18-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dravland (4,906,243) in view of Imsangjan et al. (7,011,653), and further in view of Otsubo et al. (US 2002/0151864).

Dravland, as modified by Imsangjan, discloses all aspects of the claimed invention with the exception of the placement of the elastic threads across the belly portion and the rear back portion of the article, and the crotch portion being a separate member. Otsubo teaches an article having elastic threads 23 and 24 extending across the belly portion and the rear back portion, as shown in figure 3. The crotch portion of the article is a separate member, as shown in figure 3. This configuration provides the article with a more secure and comfortable fit, as disclosed in paragraph [0006]. It would therefore be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to construct the article of Dravland with the elastic threads and separate crotch portion of Otsubo, in order to provide the article with a more secure and comfortable fit.

With respect to claim 18, the core 14 comprises absorbent material, as disclosed in column 2, line 1.

With respect to claim 19, the article comprises a fluid acquisition layer 16 disposed over the core 14, as disclosed in column 1, line 68.

Claims 14-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dravland (4,906,243) in view of Imsangjan et al. (7,011,653), and further in view of Good et al. (5,843,056).

Dravland, as modified by Imsangjan, discloses all aspects of the claimed invention with the exception of the chassis comprising a nonwoven spunbond polypropylene. Good teaches the use of spunbond polypropylene as a suitable nonwoven material for the topsheet of an absorbent article, as described in column 5, lines 51-64. It would therefore be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to construct the article of Dravland with a nonwoven spunbond polypropylene, as taught by Good, to provide a suitable topsheet for the article.
